

China Semiconductors

Localizing the next generation of long-term growth

After years of steady growth, China's semiconductor industry is poised to become a major global player as the country's government invests heavily in research and development to localize the next generation of long-term growth.

